

PBS TAKES HOME EMMYS

Ken Burns called the national parks "America's Best Idea," but surely public television itself ranks near the top of that list. Where else can you find the rich diversity of high-quality programming that you see here every day? At the recent 36th Annual Daytime Emmy Awards, for instance, public television children's programs received more awards than all other networks combined. PBS programs received 41 nominations for News and Documentary Emmys this year, nearly twice as many as the nearest competitor. Thank you for providing the financial support that allows Alabama Public Television to share these programs with everyone in our state.

A winner of nearly 40 Emmy Awards, Frontline returns to Tuesday nights this month. In its fall season premiere on October 13, Frontline examines U.S. counter-insurgency strategy in Afghanistan and Pakistan — a fight that promises to be longer and more costly than most Americans understand — through interviews with top commanders on the ground, journalists embedded with U.S. forces and reporting from Washington. Other topics this month focus on early warnings of economic meltdown that were ignored in Washington and on Wall Street, and how the middle class is faring in the recession.

Alabama Public Television continues to examine the state economy with a new For the Record special on Tuesday, October 20. Also this month, State School Superintendent Dr. Joe Morton reports on the state of Alabama schools on Spotlight on Education.
